The longest economic boycott in the history of the United States was not the Boston Tea Party. It was the boycott successfully conducted by the African American Community of Claiborne County from 1966-1977 for the purpose of simply being treated as human beings and fellow Americans. This exhibit pays tribute to the brave men and women who suffered and sacrificed to ensure that the United States of America lives up to the true meaning of its creed: “All men are created equal and endowed with certain inalienable rights”. Here in Port Gibson, the heroic stands that were taken had landmark consequences not only for residents here but for people all over the nation.

Alcorn State University, america’s oldest public historically black land-grant institution still has a lot to teach the world, not only about academic subjects but about the power of hard work and belief. In 1871 the state of Mississippi bought the campus of Oakland College with the intent of educating the descendants of former enslaved Mississippians.
